The San Angelo Carriage Works.

It was our good fortune to be shown through the immense establishment now known as the San Angelo Carriage Works which is operated by Mr. H. H. Mitchell an old resident of Sherwood and probably known by every sheepman and cowman within a hundred miles of San Angelo, as an all round sheep man and cowman.

Mr. Mitchell says he has got a fine outfit, and he sure has since he purchased the stock and machinery of J. R. Copeland, who has long enjoyed the reputation of turning out hacks and wagons, that were strictly first class and something that would last.

The machinery was in full operation, a six horse power engine was hard at it, but Mr. Mitchell said it was not heavy enough to pull the load and he would put in a 8 horse power one at once, as everything is done by machinery that is possible.

Master Mechanic John M. Moody, late of Rau & Moody, was in charge with a broad smile to welcome every customer, and up stairs we went where they put the finishing touches to the new hacks and delivery wagons. They are, without a doubt, about as near perfection as man can make them, since not a stick of timber passes the eagle eye of Mr. C. M. Copeland, the master woodman, every piece of iron or steel is carefully tested by John James, the blacksmith who as a smith can not be excelled, he is assisted by Kinny Copeland, Jack's son, and a stick of the old block and when they strike the lick they are in for business and a reputation.

Well Jack Brick, the well known sign painter, transposes a solid, substantial and a more than durable wagon into a thing of beauty as he blends the colors and attaches the emblems.

When it comes to horse shoeing Mr. Mitchell paid special stress on the merits of J. M. Moody and Jim Baird from Comanche, he says that when it comes to putting a shoe on a horse that he did not think there was any one could beat either Moody or Baird, they just know their business.

They have got about between $2000 and $3000 worth of machinery and if you want any repairing done, or your wagon tire reset without being all burnt up, you will see by their regular advertisement that they have a $600 machine which will put them on by cold shrinkage for $2 a set.

Make Mitchell a visit and make him show you through, he wants to see all of his old friends, and make a lot of new ones too.

People who have little money to spend are the people who usually get the least value for it, as many merchants take no pains to please that class of trade and seem to think that any old thing is good enough for you. ### Woodmen Unveiling.

The custom of the Woodmen of the World in erecting monuments to mark the resting place of their deceased members was carried out Sunday Nov. 10, at Fairmount Cemetery.

It was a day set apart by the Woodmen of San Angelo to unveil the monument marking the final resting place of Gottbold Huber, a member of the Sonora Lodge, who died in San Angelo. Between five and six hundred people were assembled to participate in the ceremonies.

The orator of the day was the Rev. A. L. Barr, a member of the order, and we give a synopsis of his eloquent address.

"Under the dome of these clear skies, in the silent city of the dead, we meet, to uncover this monument to the memory of one of our fallen brothers. This stone is the silent orator of a life worthily lived.

"The play of his life is ended, the curtain has fallen, the lights are out and all we have beneath this monument are the peaceful ashes of the one we loved.

"This stone stands for Love, Honor and Remembrance. Love is immortal. It is the very essence of life.

Before this stone crumbles by the touch of the fingers of time we shall have gone the same way. The white dove of peace will have flown from our graves as the freed soul wings its way to the land of rich rewards. Still this stone will stand with arms pointing heavenward, our home.

The playful child marks the place where it has planted the seeds of its little garden expecting a resurrection, and so, we mark the resting place of the bodies of our loved ones in the full hope of Resurrection and Immortality.

This monument stands for changeless truth—unmoved, it rests—in rash of storm and roll of thunder—upright as truth it stands, in summer's heat and winter's cold. In the sun's scorching heat and in the gloom of night it is ever the same, so with the true life of a noble Woodman.

As this stone was made symmetrical and beautiful by the rough blows of the quarry man and the more gentle touch of the artist and sculptor, so, the one fallen brother's life was made strong and beautiful by the varying discipline of life.

With our order there are no forgotten brothers or unmarked graves. Even in the distant Cuba and the far off Philippines the soldier Woodmen's graves are marked by enduring monuments.

To sleep the sleep of the just beneath the monumental emblems of our craft is one of great honor. The ax is laid at the root of each tree. In time each tree will fall.

The Woodman wisely provides for the comfort of his family, when his time has come to fall. The time is uncertain and may come unexpectedly, as was the case of our brother, and thus is seen the need and wisdom of our order.

The ax cannot be a substitute for the cross but as a token of industry and aggression it is one of the great factors in our moving civilization. It removes the dark forests for agriculture as education fells the forests of ignorance and vice.

Our order is one for the common people as well as for the rich. It's call, like that of Jesus, is to the world's great masses.

In the smoke, din and danger a great battle one of the noble sons of our south land stood unmoved. Those who loved to follow and obey him said, "See! he stands like a stone wall." The name was ever after justly his. In this unbending, immovable monument let us see typified the soul of truth that made Jackson's name noble and immortal and may the same heroic virtue be developed in our character."

Before the ceremonies at the cemetery were conducted the members of the order repaired to their hall where the wives and ladies of the Woodman circle had prepared a dinner and a repast for the inner man. About 150 members and friends gathered around the tables loaded with the good things of this world, and thus, this noble order goes on in making homes happy, and dispersing good cheer to all.

Chancellor Commander Nichols and several other members of the Sonora Lodge, were present at the unveiling and took part in the ceremonies.

The Phil-Harmonic Club.

The society held a social in Mr. Finger's music hall last Wednesday with immense success. The Soloists, Miss Daniels and Mrs. McAlpine were in exceptionally fine voice. The new quartette, consisting of Mrs. Mayfield and Baker and Mrs. Foreman and Wolff, was vociferously applauded, and gained golden opinions from all hearers. Miss Lela March, who sang in duet form with Mrs. McAlpine, surprised all hearers with the power of her tone and splendid delivery. She was a marked favorite.

Miss Maud Wells, accompanied by Mrs. Findlater upon the piano, and Mr. C. J. Finger on the organ, gained all hearts in the song "Jerusalem." Few singers have such a charming manner of rendering a song. Mrs. Findlater's manner of accompanying, too, is exceptionally pleasing, and approving remarks went round among the audience. Miss Wells also appeared in a piano quartette and a vocal trio, (a grand number) with Mrs. McAlpine soprano, and Mrs. Ransome, who should be heard more often, as an alto. This latter lady is a sweet songstress.

Mrs. Lucy Daniels brought over Mr. Walter Foreman as a tenor in "My Desert Queen," and he was warmly welcomed. His voice is very sweet in tone. Dr. Percy Baker is a contrast to him, inasmuch as he is of broader register. His notes are exceedingly manly and clear, and he did exceedingly well, both in quartette and duet.

Mr. Boyer and Miss McAlpine furnished instrumental music, in between, in grand style.

The people participating in the concert were as follows:

President, Mrs. J. B. Taylor; vice president, Dr. O. B. Love; musical director, Mr. C. J. Finger; secretary, Dr. Percy Baker. Leaders—Mrs. McAlpine, Miss M. Daniels.

Accompanists—Mrs. Findlater, piano; C. J. Finger, organ. Sopranos—Mrs. McAlpine, Mrs. Findlater, Miss Maud Wells, Miss M. Daniels, Miss Lela March.

Altos—Mrs. J. B. Taylor, Miss Jefferson, Mrs. Ransome, Mrs. Price.

First tenors—Dr. Mayfield, Mr. W. Foreman.

Second Tenors—Dr. Percy Baker, Mr. C. Gantt, Mr. Alexander.

First Basses—Mr. H. Wolff, Mr. Leslie Armstrong, Mr. Jefferson.

Second Basses—Dr. O. B. Love, Mr. Price.

Leader, Wind—B. P. Boyer.
